“ I will share multiple memories. The first is, know matter how old my grandmother was, I would always say grandma your old. She would say you better watch your mouth. She would than go on to say honey, your only as old as you feel.

Two days before my grandmother passed I asked her four questions: grandma what's your favorite color? She replied blue. Grandma what's your favorite flower? Her reply; red roses. Grandma if you could give me advice, what would it be? Her response: work hard, take care of your family and be honest. The last question was, grandma have I done that and are you proud of me? She said yes you have done all three and I am proud of you. You are a good kid.

I am grateful that God allowed me to read to my grandmother some of her favorite book of the Bible; Exodus which is the story about Moses before she passed. I said grandma why did you choose that book of all books, she responded by saying because she loved the story of Moses. For those who don't know the book of Exodus, which has the story of Moses means to "exit " or "depart".

Although, I tried to make it home before she passed, I did not.. However, God did allow me and her to have our special moment in time again. My grandma and I used to have Bible Studies at her house when I got stationed there. On Saturday's I would go over to her house, take my Bible and a Bible Study book and we would take turns reading the Bible and answering questions out of the book. She told me at one time she missed it. So before her passing it was my Honor to be able to read her some of her some of the story of Moses.

I Love You Granny and one day I hope to see you on the other side. Where Heaven is our resting place. No more pain, sorrow or tears.

Until we meet again.

Your granddaughter Carla Watson aka "Larla".
